1 INTRODUCTION

2 The California Cattlemen’s Association (Association) seeks a writ of mandate directing the 3 California Department of Fish and Wildlife (Department) to comply with the California 4 Endangered Species Act (Act or CESA) and conduct overdue status reviews for 233 species. The 5 Department has demurred on two grounds. First, the Department contends that the California Fish
6 and Game Commission’s (Commission) listing petition process provides an administrative remedy 7 that the Association must exhaust before seeking a writ. Second, the Department insists that the 8 Association lacks standing to sue in state court. Both arguments are wrong.

9 First, the exhaustion argument misconstrues the Association’s claim for relief. The 10 Association’s writ petition seeks an order compelling the Department to carry out its mandatory 11 duty to conduct periodic status reviews under the Act, not an order requiring the Commission — 12 a separate state agency — to list or delist any species. Pet. at 32 ¶ 2 (specifying the requested 13 relief). Second, the Association has public interest standing. This writ petition is a typical petition 14 whose “object . . . is to procure the enforcement of a public duty.” Save the Plastic Bag Coal. v.
15 City of Manhattan Beach, 52 Cal. 4th 155, 166 (2011) (quoting Bd. of Soc. Welfare v. Cty. of L.A., 16 27 Cal. 2d 98, 100-01 (1945)). Both the legislature and courts have recognized the paramount 17 public interest in protecting native wildlife under the Act — and the competing considerations 18 alleged by the Department do not outweigh this interest. The demurrer should be overruled.

19 FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

20 A. Legal Standard

21 The Association’s writ petition seeks an order compelling the Department to conduct 22 overdue status reviews for 233 species, which the Commission listed long ago as threatened or 23 endangered, but whose current conservation status is presently unknown. The Department 24 demurred. The Association opposes the demurrer.

25 Demurrer is appropriate only where a defect appears on the face of the challenged pleading.
26 Code of Civ. Proc. § 430.30. On demurrer, the petition “must be liberally construed, with a view 27 toward substantial justice between the parties.” Code of Civ. Proc. § 452; Stevens v. Superior 28 Court, 75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 601 (1999). The Court gives “the petition a reasonable interpretation,

1 reading it as a whole and viewing its parts in context.” Blank v. Kirwan, 39 Cal. 3d 311, 318
2 (1985). The Court must “deem to be true all material facts that were properly pled,” along with 3 “those facts that may be implied or inferred from those expressly alleged.” City of Morgan Hill
4 v. Bay Area Quality Mgmt. Dist., 118 Cal. App. 4th 861, 869 (2004). “If the petitioner has stated 5 a cause of action under any possible legal theory,” the demurrer will be overruled. Id. at 870.

6 B. The California Endangered Species Act

7 In 1970, California was one of the first states to establish a framework for the protection 8 of endangered wildlife. See NRDC v. Fish & Game Comm’n, 28 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1111 (1994).
9 In 1984, the state legislature enacted the current version of the California Endangered Species Act, 10 Fish and Game Code, § 2050 et seq.,<sup>1</sup> to promote the “ecological, educational, historical, 11 recreational, esthetic, economic, and scientific value” that wildlife bring to “the people of this 12 state.” § 2051(c). Patterned after the Federal Endangered Species Act, the California Act 13 recognizes that “conservation, protection, and enhancement of the species and their habitat is [also] 14 of statewide concern.” Id.

15 To facilitate the conservation, protection, and enhancement of endangered or threatened 16 native species, the Act implements various protections for species listed as threatened or 17 endangered. See, e.g., § 2080 (prohibiting the “take” of listed species). Under the Act, an 18 endangered species is currently “in serious danger of becoming extinct,” § 2062, and a threatened 19 species “although not presently threatened with extinction, is likely to become an endangered 20 species in the foreseeable future in the absence of the special protection and management efforts 21 required by [the Act].” § 2067 (emphasis added).

22 The Act delegates different duties to different agencies. The Fish and Game Commission 23 is charged with listing species as endangered or threatened under the Act. §§ 2070, 2071. The 24 Department of Fish and Wildlife, as a result of these listings, must conduct five-year status reviews 25 for every species listed under the Act, to provide updated information regarding the current 26 condition of each species. § 2077.

27 _____
28 <sup>1</sup> Unless otherwise noted, all statutory references are to the Fish and Game Code.

1 C. The Department’s Obligation to Conduct Five-Year Status Reviews

2 The Act directs the Department of Fish and Wildlife to “review species listed as an 3 endangered species or as a threatened species to determine if the conditions that led to the original 4 listing are still present.” § 2077(a). Current knowledge of California’s wildlife is foundational to 5 the conservation of species under the Act. Both the ESA and the Act require reviews of every 6 listed species every five years. See NRDC v. Fish & Game Comm’n, 28 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 7 1117-18 (1994) (federal ESA should be used to interpret similar provisions under the California 8 Act).

9 Current information about threatened or endangered species is also needed to afford them 10 the protection contemplated in the Act. Cf. e.g., Env’tl. Council of Sacramento v. City of 11 Sacramento, 142 Cal. App. 4th 1018, 1024-27 (2006) (detailing conservation plans for listed 12 species). Current information is necessary to calibrate conservation plans and protections to the 13 actual condition of the species, to ensure adequate protection while also avoiding regulatory 14 limitations and restrictions that are excessive based on a species’ current condition. Without 15 periodic status reviews, the Department cannot ascertain whether the statute has met its ultimate 16 goal in rehabilitating the population of listed species “to the point at which the measures provided 17 are no longer necessary.” § 2061.<sup>2</sup>

18 D. The Department’s Duty To Conduct Status Reviews for All Listed Species
19 Is Distinct from the Commission’s Duty To List Species

20 The Commission’s duty to consider petitions to list species is different from the 21 Department’s mandatory duty to conduct five-year status reviews of species that the Commission 22 has already listed. The legislature, through different sections of the Fish and Game Code, assigned 23 each agency distinct tasks.

24 ///

25 _____
26 <sup>2</sup> The federal government conducts five-year status reviews under the federal Endangered Species 27 Act (ESA). Recent federal status reviews revealed that the listings of seven species — all of which 28 are also listed under the Act — did not comport with current conditions. See Pet. ¶ 24 at p. 5 (Modoc Sucker, San Clemente Island Indian Paintbrush, San Clemente Island larkspur, Santa Cruz Cypress, Beach Layia, San Clemente Island bush-mallow, and the Least Bell’s vireo).

1 The listing petition process allows an “interested person” to petition the Commission to list
2 a particular species. § 2071.<sup>3</sup> The Commission considers input from the Department to determine 3 if the listing is warranted, including a status review. § 2071.5. Separately, the Act requires the 4 Department to conduct status reviews for each listed species every five years following their 5 listing. § 2077. The Department’s mandatory five-year status reviews are not part of the 6 Commission’s listing petition process; they are a result of that process.

7 ARGUMENT

8 I

9 THE ASSOCIATION NEED NOT PETITION
10 THE COMMISSION BEFORE IT ASKS THE DEPARTMENT
11 TO CONDUCT MANDATORY FIVE-YEAR STATUS REVIEWS

12 The Association has no administrative remedies to exhaust before the Commission. The 13 Association’s writ is directed at the performance of the post-listing status reviews, which are 14 required as the result of the Commission’s listing decisions, rather than altering the listing status 15 of any particular species before the Commission. The exhaustion of administrative remedies 16 doctrine “bars the pursuit of a judicial remedy by a person to whom administrative action was 17 available for the purpose of enforcing the right [Petitioner] seeks to enforce in court . . .” Citizens 18 for Open Gov’t v. City of Lodi, 144 Cal. App. 4th 865, 874 (2006).

19 As plainly stated in its petition, the Association is seeking an order directing the 20 Department to conduct overdue status reviews for the 233 species already listed by the 21 Commission. Pet. at 32 ¶ 2 (requesting “a writ of mandate directing the Respondents to conduct 22 the status reviews mandated by § 2077 . . .”). The Department, rather than the Commission, is 23 solely responsible for conducting such reviews. § 2077(a) (“The department shall review species 24 listed as an endangered species or as a threatened species every five years . . .”). Nothing in the 25 Act provides the Association an administrative procedure to require the Department to perform the 26 mandatory five-year reviews of species already listed by the Commission. Accordingly, the 27 “exhaustion requirement does not apply” because “no administrative remedy is available” for the

28 <sup>3</sup> “Listing” includes the Department’s power to delist or alter the listing of a particular species under the Act.

1 Association to obtain its requested relief. Eight Unnamed Physicians v. Medical Exec. Comm. of 2 Medical Staff of Washington, 150 Cal. App. 4th 503, 511 (2007).

3 The Department misrepresents the petition as an attempt “to remove or re-designate 4 hundreds of species currently protected under the [Act].” Demurrer at 1. The Association’s writ 5 petition does not demand a different listing for any species, but rather a status review for all species 6 that are currently listed, as the law requires. Five-year status reviews are not conditioned on any 7 petition to the Commission, and do not even require the Commission to revisit any species’ listing 8 status. See § 2077.

9 And although a petition to the Commission may lead to a petition-related status review as 10 part of the listing decision, the availability of the listing petition process does not excuse the 11 Department’s failure to conduct mandatory post-listing five year reviews. The status review in 12 response to a listing petition is different from the one triggered by the Act’s post-listing five-year 13 deadlines, as is plain from multiple provisions in the Act. First, the statute that mandates five-year 14 status reviews specifies that “[notwithstanding] any other provision of this section, the commission 15 or the department may review a species at any time based upon a petition . . . .” § 2077. Second, 16 only an “interested person” may petition the Commission to list “the petitioned species.” § 2073.4.
17 By contrast, the CESA requires five-year status reviews of “each listed species.” § 2077(e). Third, 18 a status review triggered by a listing petition to the Commission is performed only if “a petition 19 is accepted by the commission.” §§ 2074.4, 2074.6. The Department, however, “shall review” 20 endangered and threatened “species every five years” after the Commission has listed them.
21 § 2077.

22 Decisions interpreting the federal government’s obligation to conduct status reviews under 23 the federal Endangered Species Act further debunk the Department’s exhaustion argument. The 24 listing petition process is available under both the ESA and the California Act. Compare 16 U.S.C.
25 § 1533(b)(3)(A), with § 2072.3. Nonetheless, federal courts have never held that the petition 26 process is an administrative remedy that a petitioner must exhaust before compelling the 27 Department to perform its “mandatory and nondiscretionary duty” to conduct status reviews.
28

1 Florida Home Builders Ass’n v. Norton, 496 F. Supp. 2d 1330, 1333 (M.D. Fla. 2007).<sup>4</sup> This Court
2 should use that authority to guide its interpretation of the California Act. See NRDC, 3 28 Cal. App. 4th at 1117-18.<sup>5</sup>

4 II

5 THE ASSOCIATION HAS STANDING TO CHALLENGE
6 THE DEPARTMENT’S FAILURE TO CONDUCT
7 MANDATORY FIVE-YEAR STATUS REVIEWS FOR 233
8 SPECIES UNDER THE CALIFORNIA ENDANGERED SPECIES ACT

9 A. The Association’s Petition Furthers a Significant Public Interest in 10 Compelling the Department to Conduct Five-Year Status Reviews

11 The Association has standing to compel the Department of Fish and Wildlife to conduct 12 mandatory five-year status reviews as directed by the Act. “[W]here the question is one of public 13 right and the object of the mandamus is to procure the enforcement of a public duty,” the 14 Association “need not show that [it] has any legal or special interest in the result, since it is 15 sufficient that [it] is interested as a citizen in having the laws executed and the duty in question 16 enforced.” Save the Plastic Bag Coal., 52 Cal. 4th at 166 (quoting Bd. of Soc. Welfare, 27 Cal. 2d 17 at 100-01). This variety of standing — often referred to as public interest standing — “promotes 18 the policy of guaranteeing citizens the opportunity to ensure that no governmental body impairs 19 or defeats the purpose of legislation establishing a public right.” Green v. Obledo, 29 Cal. 3d 126, 20 144 (1981).

21 The Association’s petition seeks to compel the Department to fulfill its obligation to 22 perform five-year status reviews. The plain text of the statute belies the Department’s argument 23 that its duty to comply with “five-year deadlines [is], at most, a directory and not a mandatory

24 <sup>4</sup> Although the decision does not mention the petition process, the complaint in that case elaborates 25 that the only step the plaintiff took before filing the lawsuit was serving a 60-day notice of action as required by federal law. See Compl. ¶ 4, available at 2005 WL 3612288.

26 <sup>5</sup> Because the Association has petitioned for traditional mandamus, “the exhaustion requirement 27 speaks to whether there exists an adequate legal remedy” for the relief sought. City of Oakland 28 v. Oakland Police and Fire Retirement System, 224 Cal. App. 4th 210, 235 (2014). For the reasons explained in this section, the listing petition process is inadequate to provide status reviews for “each species” listed for more than five years. § 2077.

1 duty.”<sup>6</sup> Demurrer at 12. In other parts of the statute, the legislature used language connoting
2 discretion on part of the Department. See § 2077(d) (“Notwithstanding any other part of this 3 section, the commission or the department may review a species at any time based upon a petition 4 or upon other data available to the department and the commission.” (emphasis added)). But in 5 requiring periodic status reviews, the legislature used the term “shall” to describe the Department’s 6 mandatory obligation. See Walt Rankin & Assoc., Inc. v. City of Murrieta, 84 Cal. App. 4th 605, 7 614 (2000) (“usual rule with California codes” is that “shall” is mandatory and “may” is 8 permissive); Lexecon, Inc. v. Milberg Weiss Bershad Hynes & Lerach, 523 U.S. 26, 35 (1998) 9 (“The Panel’s instruction comes in terms of the mandatory ‘shall,’ which normally creates an 10 obligation impervious to judicial discretion.”). It is therefore unsurprising that the federal 11 government’s analogous “duty to conduct status reviews every five years is a mandatory and 12 nondiscretionary duty . . . .” Florida Home Builders Ass’n, 496 F. Supp. 2d at 1333. The 13 Department’s duty under the Act should be viewed the same way. NRDC, 28 Cal. App. 4th at 14 1117-18 (federal ESA should be used to interpret similar provisions under the Act).

15 The Department invokes only a single case to rebut this settled rule of statutory 16 interpretation. But that case does not help the Department. In Woods v. Department of Motor 17 Vehicles, the California Court of Appeal considered a writ petition from a driver whose license was 18 suspended for failing to provide proof of financial responsibility after an automobile accident.
19 211 Cal. App. 3d 1263, 1265 (1989). Petitioner invoked a statute that granted him a right to a 20 formal hearing within 30 days, but the hearing was not conducted for nearly three months. Id.
21 But, unlike this case, Woods did not seek to enforce the DMV’s duty to conduct hearings within 22 30 days. Rather, the “sole issue” presented was whether the DMV’s failure to conduct a timely 23 hearing necessarily invalidated suspension of Woods’ driver’s license. Id. at 1266.

24
25 <sup>6</sup> As discussed below, the “directory” language relates to whether the government’s failure to 26 conduct a mandatory task excuses a petitioner’s own failure to comply with the statute. The 27 Association’s petition, however, concerns only the Department’s mandatory task to conduct status 28 reviews, and no obligation of the Association. See Woods v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 211 Cal. App. 3d 1263, 1266 (1989) (the mandatory-permissive dichotomy refers to whether the government is required to follow a procedure; the mandatory-directory duality “denotes whether failure to comply” will invalidate “the governmental action to which the procedural requirement relates”).

1           The Woods court construed the word “shall” to impose a mandatory duty to conduct 2 hearings within 30 days. Id. It ruled against the petitioner, however, because the statute was 3 directory in the sense that “failure to comply” will not necessarily “have the effect of invalidating 4 the governmental action to which the procedural requirement relates.” Id. at 1267 (emphasis 5 added). Here, however, the Association is not seeking to invalidate any particular consequence 6 of the Department’s failure to conduct the mandatory status reviews — e.g., prosecution for the 7 “take” of a species for which the status reviews have not been conducted. Rather, this is a 8 quintessential public interest lawsuit that is intended to get the Department to conduct the status 9 reviews — and nothing more.

10           The court in Woods also explained that the purpose of the hearing deadline in that case was 11 to “promptly suspend[] financially irresponsible drivers,” and that such purpose “would not be 12 served by allowing [Petitioner] to avoid suspension altogether.” Id. at 1270. Consequently, 13 granting Woods his requested relief, i.e., invalidating the suspension of his driver’s license, would 14 have been “wholly inconsistent with the Legislature’s intent in pass[ing] the financial 15 responsibility laws.” Id. at 1268. Here, however, the Association is only seeking to get the 16 Department to conduct the status reviews, which furthers the purposes of the Act.

17           The Department’s mandatory duty to regularly assess the condition of listed species serves 18 the weighty public interest in the effective protection and management of California wildlife. The 19 legislative policy, as stated in the Act, is to “conserve, protect, restore, and enhance any 20 endangered species or any threatened species and its habitat.” § 2052; cf. Hector F. v. El Centro 21 Elementary Sch. Dist., 227 Cal. App. 4th 331, 341 (2014) (finding public interest standing by 22 reference to the interests articulated in the statutory text). The Act employs various mechanisms 23 to reach its goal of bringing endangered and threatened species to the point at which such 24 mechanisms “are no longer necessary,” § 2061, which presumes knowledge of the current status 25 of those species. The status reviews therefore play an integral part in “[t]he protection and 26 preservation of California’s wildlife,” which the Department recently represented to the courts as 27 “of unquestionably great public interest.” Department’s Brief, Pac. Shores Prop. Owners Ass’n 28 v. Dep’t of Fish and Game, 2013 WL 7087194, at 37 (Sac. Sup. Ct., Nov.1, 2013) (citing § 2052).

1 California courts have affirmed the weighty public interest in protecting endangered species
2 under the Act, and construe its provisions liberally, in light of the “great remedial and public 3 importance” of the Act. San Bernardino Valley Audubon Soc’y. v. City of Moreno Valley, 44 Cal.
4 App. 4th 593, 601 (1996). It is universally accepted that “CESA embodies a significant public 5 policy and enforcing it constitutes an important public interest.” CBD v. Cal. Fish and Game
6 Comm’n, 195 Cal. App. 4th 128, 139 (2011).

7 The public interest in enforcing the Act — as recognized by the legislature and courts — 8 is more than sufficient to endow the Association with standing to bring this lawsuit. “[S]trict rules 9 of standing that might be appropriate in other contexts have no application where broad and long 10 term [environmental] effects are concerned.” Save the Plastic Bag Coal., 52 Cal. 4th at 170 11 (quoting Bozung v. Local Agency Formation Comm’n, 13 Cal. 3d 263, 272 (1975)).

12 That the Association is seeking relief from the Department, not the Commission, confirms 13 that it is seeking to further the public interest. Rather than petitioning the Commission for a 14 different listing of a particular species, the Association sued the Department for failing to conduct 15 status reviews of 233 species listed under the CESA. By doing so, the petition vindicates the 16 public interest in current information about each species, and restoring the population of each 17 species that is currently threatened or endangered. See § 2052 (It is the public policy of the state 18 to “conserve, protect, restore, and enhance any endangered species or any threatened species . . .
19 .”) (emphasis added). In short, in enforcing the mandatory status reviews under the CESA, the 20 Association is vindicating the public interest.

21 B. No Competing Considerations Outweigh the Substantial Public Interest in 22 Compelling the Department To Conduct Mandatory Five-Year Status
Reviews

23 There are no competing considerations of a more urgent nature that outweigh the 24 Association’s standing to sue in the public interest. See Carsten v. Psychology Examining 25 Comm’n, 27 Cal. 3d 793, 797-99 (1980). The Department relies on two cases for its contrary 26 argument, but those cases bear little relation to the circumstances here.

27 Carsten involved a lawsuit brought by a dissident board member of the agency responsible 28 for licensing psychologists. The board member disagreed with the board’s decision to approve

1 applicants who had achieved a passing grade on a national examination rather than the 75 percent 2 grade required by state law — and then sued to reverse that decision. The California Supreme 3 Court refused to provide the plaintiff with standing in light of her participation, as a board member, 4 in the very decision she subsequently challenged in court. Here, however, the Association has no
5 role in the Department’s neglect of its duty to conduct five-year status reviews. For that reason, 6 the “conflicts of interest and perpetuation of litigation which were of concern in Carsten are not 7 present here.” Hector F., 227 Cal. App. at 342.

8 Sacramento County Fire Protection Dist. v. Sacramento County Assessment Board, 9 75 Cal. App. 4th 327 (1999), is similarly off point. There, a fire district challenged the local 10 assessment board’s acceptance of a stipulation, between the county assessor and a landowner, 11 which substantially reduced the value of the land. Id. at 331-34. The court declined to grant 12 standing to the fire district because doing so would undermine the assessment process, in which 13 the district’s interests were adequately represented by the county. This case, however, does not 14 involve a public agency’s attempt to challenge an agreement between another agency and a third 15 party. The Association’s challenge thus does not threaten to “undermin[e] a carefully developed 16 statutory scheme which delegates responsibility among local agencies.” Hector F., 227 Cal. App.
17 at 342. On the contrary, a writ of mandate here would direct the Department to do precisely the 18 task assigned to it by the Act. The Association is not in the “unique position” that foreclosed 19 standing for the petitioners in Carsten or Sacramento County Fire Protection District. Id.

20 Further, the Department’s contention that public interest standing is inappropriate, because 21 it would “redirect [] limited resources,” proves far too much. The government must redirect 22 resources any time it is ordered to follow the law. Requiring the Department to conduct status 23 reviews in accordance with the Act does not redirect resources any more than compelling an 24 elementary school to follow California anti-discrimination law, see Hector F., 227 Cal. App. at 25 342, or forcing a city to prepare an environmental impact report, See Save the Plastic Bag Coal., 26 52 Cal. 4th at 160. The Department’s assertion misses the whole point of a status review: to direct 27 resources away from projects that are optional — and into projects that are mandatory. § 2077.

28 ///

1 The Department's problem with "limited resources" plagues all government entities, and 2 the legislature was well aware of the state's limited resources at the time it enacted the Act. See 3 Governor's Budget for 1983-84 at 6 (estimating a budget deficit of 446 million).<sup>7</sup> Nonetheless, the 4 Act reflects the legislative judgment that the public interest served by regular status reviews of 5 listed species outweighs the costs. In any event, elementary schools and municipal government — 6 entities with smaller coffers than the state — cannot insulate themselves from judicial review by 7 noting that their resources are limited; neither can the Department in this case. The Department 8 should "take up [financial] constraints with [the legislature] rather than let mandatory deadlines 9 expire with inaction." Florida Home Builders Ass'n, 496 F. Supp. 2d at 1336.<sup>8</sup>

10 CONCLUSION

11 The Department's motion for a demurrer should be overruled.

27 <sup>8</sup> To be sure, the Department's assumption that performing status reviews would deplete its coffers 28 is speculative at best; it presumes that the legislature will never fund the Department adequately for the Department's responsibilities under the CESA.
