Attorneys for Appellant

SUPERIOR COURT OF ARIZONA

IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF MARICOPA

SARRA L.,

Appellant,

v.

MIKE FAUST, Director, Arizona Department of Child Safety;
ARIZONA DEPARTMENT OF CHILD SAFETY,

Appellees.

Case No. 2022-000221-00

Office of Administrative Hearings
No. 21C-1159943-DCS

MOTION FOR STAY OF AGENCY DECISION
(ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED)

Appellant Sarra L. respectfully requests a stay of the agency decision pending the final

1 disposition of this appeal under A.R.S. § 12-911 and JRAD¹ Rule 3. The ALJ erroneously found
2 probable cause to substantiate DCS's allegation of neglect against Sarra L. Exh1:7 (ALJ 3 decision); Exh2:1 (certifying ALJ's decision as final).² Several statutory-construction and 4 constitutional principles support a stay here. Staying the decision means that DCS cannot place
5 Sarra L.'s name in the Central Registry while this case remains pending in Arizona's courts—6 or that DCS must remove her name from the list if already placed there. Sarra L. is filing and 7 serving this motion simultaneously with the Notice of Appeal according to JRAD Rules 2(c), 8 4(c), and ARCP Rule 4.

9 Legal and Factual Background³

10 During the Thanksgiving 2020 shopping season, when Covid-19 raged and grocery 11 stores encouraged shoppers to avoid family shopping trips (to prevent the gathering of large 12 crowds and reduce in-store time), Sarra L. let her seven-year-old son Ryan (pseudonym) and 13 his five-year-old friend play at a park while she went to buy groceries. Exh1:1–2. Sarra knew 14 the area to be safe; she had played at the same park as a child, and she saw a friend teaching a 15 tai chi class at the park. Exh1:2. She believed the children, if the need arose, would consult with 16 that friend. Sarra does not believe in helicopter parenting, but instead believes that children's 17 developmental growth and needs are best served by allowing them to play independently in 18 safe places as occurred here. Exh1:4.

19 While Sarra was at the grocery store, the tai chi teacher called and told Sarra that a police 20 officer was talking with her children. Id. She rushed back; the officer charged her with two 21 counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Id. The children were never suspected of Hearings), PSRT (Protective Services Review Team).

26 ² Exhibit 1 (ALJ Decision); Exhibit 2 (DCS Decision).

27 ³ The ALJ trial transcript is not currently available. Per A.R.S. § 12-904(B)(5), and A.A.C.
28 § R2-19-122(B), OAH makes an audio copy available, which Sarra L. then must get transcribed and deliver to OAH before OAH can certify it as part of the record. Sarra, through her attorneys, has requested but has not yet received the audio copy of the ALJ hearing.

1 being in any danger, so the county prosecutors dropped the charges in exchange for Sarra 2 taking a life-skills class. Id.

3 Despite the charges being dismissed, DCS conducted its own investigation and 4 concluded there was probable cause that Sarra neglected her son Ryan. Id. at 3. Sarra requested 5 an OAH hearing, which occurred in March 2022. Id. The ALJ concluded that there was 6 “probable cause,” A.R.S. § 8-811(K), to conclude that Sarra “neglected” Ryan as that term is 7 defined in A.R.S. § 8-201(25), and recommended that Sarra’s name be entered in the Central 8 Registry under A.R.S. § 8-804(F). Exh1:7.

9 DCS maintains a “central registry of reports of child abuse and neglect that are 10 substantiated.” A.R.S. § 8-804(A). There are two ways to substantiate a report: (1) by DCS 11 based on administrative investigation under A.R.S. §§ 8-800–819, or (2) by Arizona state courts 12 under A.R.S. § 8-844(C). Sarra’s case falls under the first category. Both court- and DCS-13 substantiated child-neglect allegations are recorded in DCS’s Central Registry. A.R.S. § 8-14 804(A). A.R.S. § 8-804 lists at least 20 ways in which a Central Registry entry can and will be 15 used against Sarra.

16 “Substantiated finding” is not defined in the statute. DCS, using its generic rulemaking 17 authority under A.R.S. § 8-453(A)(5), has defined it as, among other things, “a proposed 18 substantiated finding that ... [t]he alleged perpetrator did not timely appeal.” A.A.C. § R21-1-19 501(17). A timely appeal to Superior Court renders DCS’s decision provisional until the 20 Superior Court affirms it.

21 DCS had until June 3, 2022, to accept, reject, or modify the ALJ decision. A.R.S. §§ 1-22 243, 41-1092.08. Having taken “[n]o action” by that date, Exh2:1, DCS certified the ALJ 23 decision as final on June 16, 2022. Exh2:1; A.R.S. § 41-1092.08(D).

24 Sarra L. had 35 days from the June 16 DCS decision to appeal to the Superior Court 25 under A.R.S. §§ 12-904(A), 41-1092.08(H). Sarra L. has timely filed a notice of appeal with this 26 Court on July 15, i.e., within 35 days.

27 Standard for Granting a Stay Pending Appeal

28 A.R.S. § 12-911(A)(1) authorizes this Court to stay an administrative agency’s decision

1 “for good cause shown.” The Court can grant a stay “[w]ith or without bond, ... and before 2 or after the [appellees] filing of the notice of appearance.” Id.

3 JRAD Rule 3(b) states the stay standard: “1. A colorable claim demonstrating, as regards 4 substantive merit, a seemingly valid, genuine, or plausible claim under the circumstances of the 5 case; and 2. That the balance of harm favors granting the stay.”

6 In 2020, the Arizona Supreme Court amended JRAD Rule 3 to reject the preliminary-7 injunction-style standard in favor of the lenient stay standard quoted above.⁴ Thus, instead of 8 a strong likelihood of success on the merits, courts stay agency action if there is a “colorable,” 9 “plausible” claim. And instead of irreparable injury, outweighing harm, or a showing of which 10 side public policy favors, the Court stays agency action if the “balance of harm favors granting 11 the stay.” JRAD Rule 3(b); see also P&P Mehta LLC v. Jones, 211 Ariz. 505, 507–10 ¶¶6–25 (App.
12 2005) (explaining reasons for the “colorable claim” and “balance of harm” factors for granting 13 JRAD stays, and why the preliminary-injunction factors “d[o] not provide an appropriate 14 template by which to judge whether a stay of an administrative agency’s decision should be 15 granted”).

16 The “colorable claim” factor does not require “a showing that the petitioner is 17 reasonably likely to prevail on appeal,” but “something less”: “an assertion that is seemingly 18 valid, genuine, or plausible, under the circumstances of the case.” P&P, 211 Ariz. at 510 ¶21
19 (simplified); JRAD Rule 3(b)(1). To be “plausible” means less than “a probability requirement.”
20 Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556 (2007).

21 The “balance of harm” factor does not require “irreparable harm”; it only requires the 22 Court to weigh “the petitioner’s harm ... against the harm that would accrue to the agency or 23 other parties to the proceedings.” P&P, 211 Ariz. at 510 ¶23; JRAD Rule 3(b)(2). And if “the 24 balance of harm tips in favor of the petitioner” then the petitioner has shown “the ‘harm’ 25 necessary to constitute ‘good cause.’” P&P, 211 Ariz. at 510 ¶23; JRAD Rule 3(b)(2). To 1 balance harms, the Court can employ “tools ... to mitigate potential harm to the agency’s 2 interest” such as requiring a “bond” “if monetary or performance considerations are involved.”

3 PéP, 211 Ariz. at 510 ¶24; JRAD Rule 3(c). Requiring a bond “may allay the harm” sufficiently 4 for the Court to “find that the balance of harm favors the petitioner.” Id. at 510 ¶24.

5 Reasons for Staying Agency Action

6 I. Sarra L.’s Claims Are Colorable

7 DCS can place in the Central Registry only “substantiated” “reports of child abuse and 8 neglect.” A.R.S. § 8-804(A). An abuse or neglect finding becomes “substantiated” only if, as 9 relevant here, “[t]he alleged perpetrator did not timely appeal.” A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b).
10 Sarra L. timely appealed the DCS decision to Superior Court, so there is no “substantiated 11 finding” that DCS can enter in the Central Registry while this timely-filed appeal remains 12 pending. Even in the absence of the regulation, it would violate the state and federal 13 constitutions’ Due Process Clauses and the state constitution’s Separation of Powers Clause, 14 to place people’s names in the Central Registry while a timely-filed appeal remains pending in 15 state courts. Sarra, therefore, presents a colorable claim that DCS should be stopped from 16 entering her name in the Central Registry while her state-court appeal remains pending, or that 17 DCS should be ordered to remove her name from the Central Registry if DCS has already 18 entered it there while this case remains pending in state courts.

19 A. DCS Can Place Only Substantiated Findings in the Central Registry

20 Traditional tools of construction resolve this case in Sarra’s favor. A “substantiated 21 finding” is a finding that:

- 22 a. An administrative law judge found to be true by a probable cause standard 23 of proof after notice and an administrative hearing and the Department 24 Director accepted the decision;
- 25 b. The alleged perpetrator did not timely appeal; or
- 26 c. The alleged perpetrator was not entitled to an administrative hearing 27 because the alleged perpetrator was legally excluded as defined in subsection 28 (11).

1 A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17).⁵ See also Phillip B. v. DCS, ___ Ariz. ___, 2022 WL 2128078, at ¶16 (App.
2 June 14, 2022) (same).

3 Subsections (17)(a) and (17)(b) must be read together because there is no “or” after 4 (17)(a). When drafters omit an “and” or an “or” between two enumerated items, “it is generally 5 considered to convey the same meaning ... as though and were inserted between the items.”
6 Antonin Scalia & Bryan A. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 119 (2012).
7 Reading Law gives the example of a Wyoming statute that has the semi-colon-or formulation in 8 some but not all subsections. Reading Law 123 ((a); or (b); or (c); (d)) (discussing Voss v. Ralston 9 (In re Voss's Adoption), 550 P.2d 481 (Wyo. 1976); 1957 Wyo. Sess. Laws § 1-710.2). The 10 Wyoming Supreme Court construed the statute to require both (c) and (d). Id. at 124. Scalia and 11 Garner say that that reading “was correct” because “asyndeton (absence of conjunction) is 12 normally equivalent to syndeton (use of the conjunction and).” Id. The court’s reading, Reading 13 Law explained, also “compli[es] with ... the omitted-case canon ... [and] the presumption of 14 consistent usage.” Id.

15 So too here. The absent conjunction between (17)(a) and (17)(b) should be read as an 16 “and.” Thus, the ALJ must find probable cause and the DCS Director must accept that decision 17 and the defendant must fail to timely appeal for there to be a “substantiated finding” that DCS 18 can enter in the Central Registry.

19 In Phillip B., for example, the ALJ found no probable cause, DCS’s Director rejected 20 the ALJ’s decision, and Phillip timely appealed; the Court of Appeals then ordered DCS to 21 remove Mr. Phillip B.’s name from the Central Registry. 2022 WL 2128078, at ¶¶16–17. This 22 Court should do the same in Sarra’s case because, although the ALJ found probable cause and 23 the DCS Director accepted that decision, Sarra did timely appeal to this Court. As explained 24 below, this reading of A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17) is also necessitated by the constitutional-doubt 25 canon. Reading Law 247–251.

26
27 ⁵ Subsection (17)(c) refers to A.A.C. § R21-1-501(10), which talks about a previous 28 substantiated finding made by an ALJ or a court based on “the same allegations.” Since neither exists here, (17)(c) is not in play in this case.

1 B. Given Sarra's Timely Appeal, the Finding Is Not "Substantiated," and 2 Therefore Her Name Cannot Be Placed in the Central Registry

3 The plain meaning of Subsection (17)(b) resolves the matter in Sarra's favor. The word 4 "appeal" in (17)(b) refers to a timely appeal to a Superior Court. Sarra timely appealed the DCS 5 decision to the Superior Court. Therefore, the ALJ's finding that she neglected Ryan is not a 6 "substantiated finding." That means DCS cannot place her name in the Central Registry while 7 this case remains pending in state courts—and DCS must remove it if DCS has already entered 8 her name in the Registry.

9 The word "appeal" in (17)(b) plainly refers to an appeal to a Superior Court. First, Trisha 10 A. v. DCS explained that "a word or phrase is presumed to bear the same meaning throughout 11 a text." 247 Ariz. 84, 88 ¶17 (2019) (simplified) (quoting Reading Law 170). And "a material 12 variation in terms suggests a variation in meaning." Reading Law 170 (presumption of consistent 13 usage canon). The law consistently uses the word "appeal" to mean something different from 14 "hearing." The statute, A.R.S. § 8-811, consistently uses the word "hearing" 21 times to denote 15 an OAH hearing. And the corresponding regulations, A.A.C. §§ R21-1-501 et seq., consistently 16 use the word "hearing" 18 times to denote an OAH hearing.⁶ DCS's regulations, by contrast, 17 use the word "appeal" six times in four separate sections, plainly referring to a judicial appeal 18 after an OAH decision.⁷ Simply put, "hearing" means the OAH hearing, and an "appeal" is the 19 review process in Superior Court. Consequently, a finding is not substantiated under A.A.C.
20 § R21-1-501(17) while a timely appeal is pending in Superior Court.

21 Second, the absurdity doctrine, Reading Law 234–239, states that courts read the words 22 as written to avoid "absurd," "untenable" or "irrational" results. State v. Estrada, 201 Ariz. 247, 23 251 (2001). As a practical matter, it is absurd to think of the first-ever hearing a person gets 24 (the OAH hearing) as an "appeal." Thus, the use of "appeal" in the phrase "[t]he alleged 25 perpetrator did not timely appeal," A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b), refers to an appeal to Superior 26 ⁶ Five sections use the word "hearing" a total of 18 times, all to denote an OAH hearing.

27 A.A.C. §§ R21-1-501 (six times), R21-1-502 (one time), R21-1-503 (two times), R21-1-504 (five times), R21-1-505 (four times).

28 ⁷ A.A.C. §§ R21-1-501 (three times), R21-1-505 (one time), R21-1-507 (one time), R21-1-508 (one time).

1 Court, not to an OAH hearing. That is, the finding against Sarra is not a “substantiated finding”
2 because she “timely appeal[ed]” to the Superior Court. The Court should so conclude and stay 3 the agency decision.

4 Third, other contextual clues support reading the word “appeal” in (17)(b) to mean an 5 appeal to Superior Court. For example, A.A.C. § R21-1-508(A) states, “[i]f the perpetrator does 6 not appeal the proposed substantiation, PSRT shall enter the perpetrator’s name and the 7 substantiated finding in the Central Registry.” Even if Section 508(A)’s “appeal” could be read 8 to mean a hearing before the OAH, Section 508 states that if an appeal is taken, no entry in the 9 Central Registry can be made.

10 The interpretive-direction canon also shows that subsections (17)(a), (17)(b), and (17)(c) 11 capture the entire universe of situations that give rise to a “substantiated finding.” When a 12 “definitional section says that a word ‘means’ something, the clear import is that that is its only 13 meaning.” Reading Law 226. For example, if a statute defines “domestic animal” as “any equine 14 animal, bovine animal, sheep, goat, and pig,” the definition, correctly understood, excludes cats.
15 Id. at 227 (explaining Commonwealth v. Massini, 188 A.2d 816, 817 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1963)). Because 16 A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17) (emphasis added), which is the definition section, starts, 17 “‘Substantiated Finding’ means,” the definition given in its three subsections is its only meaning; 18 anything that does not meet that definition cannot be a “substantiated finding.”

19 But even if the word “appeal” were construed to refer to the OAH hearing, the outcome 20 would be the same. Sarra “timely appeal[ed]” DCS’s initial substantiation decision finding 21 neglect by requesting an OAH hearing within 20 days of receiving DCS’s letter. See A.R.S. §§ 8-22 811(A), (C) (giving the 20-day deadline to “request ... a hearing”); Exh1:3 at ¶7 (noting that 23 DCS’s “letter dated January 22, 2021 ... notified [Sarra] of a proposed substantiated finding of 24 neglect”); Exh1:3 at ¶9 (noting that Sarra “submitted an appeal ... on or about February 11, 25 2021”). January 22 to February 11 is 20 days.

26 For these reasons, Sarra has presented a “colorable claim,” JRAD Rule 3(b)(1), that 27 there is no “substantiated finding” here. A stay should thus be issued to stop DCS from 28

1 entering her name in the Central Registry, or to order its removal if DCS has already placed 2 her name there.

3 C. The State and Federal Due Process Clauses Require a Final Resolution 4 of the Merits by State Courts Before DCS can Place a Person's Name in 5 the Central Registry

6 Even assuming A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b) does not require a stay, the Court should still 7 stay DCS's decision because Sarra states a "colorable claim" under the Due Process Clauses of 8 the state and federal constitutions. Ariz. Const. art. 2, § 4; U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1. Indeed, 9 if A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17) is construed to allow DCS to place Sarra's name in the Central 10 Registry before she exhausts her state court appeal, then it is unconstitutional.

11 The constitutional-doubt canon requires courts to "avoid constitutional doubt by 12 interpreting a rule in a manner that does no violence to its text." Jones v. Sterling, 210 Ariz. 308, 13 315 ¶27 (2005); State v. Arevalo, 249 Ariz. 370, 373 ¶9 (2020) (same) (quoting Reading Law 247-14 251). To avoid infringing on vital due process rights, the Court should grant the stay and bar 15 placement of Sarra's name in the Central Registry.

16 The Due Process Clauses require that DCS not execute its adjudicative decision against 17 a person if that person timely files an action in state court challenging that agency decision.
18 That is because the statutory scheme enables DCS to act as the investigator, prosecutor, judge, 19 jury, and executor in DCS-substantiation cases:

- 20 • DCS investigates child-neglect allegations. A.R.S. §§ 8-804, 8-811, 8-804.01(B)(1).
- 21 • DCS makes the initial decision, which is final if the person against whom the 22 decision is made does not request an OAH hearing. A.R.S. §§ 8-811(A), (C), (E).
- 23 • DCS then prosecutes the matter during the OAH hearing against the alleged 24 perpetrator. A.R.S. §§ 8-811(I), (J).
- 25 • If the OAH decision is challenged, DCS acts as the reviewing adjudicator. A.R.S.
26 § 41-1092.08(B), (F).
- 27 • And in all scenarios, DCS acts as the enforcer by entering names in the Central 28 Registry. A.R.S. § 8-804(A).

29 Sarra presents a colorable claim that entering her name in the Central Registry under 30 this scheme while her timely-filed state-court case remains pending flunks the test of Mathews 31 v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319 (1976). The Arizona Supreme Court has instructed state courts to

1 analyze the challenged statutory scheme and the government's actions under Mathews in 2 challenges brought under the federal Due Process Clause. Horne v. Polk, 242 Ariz. 226, 230 ¶15
3 (2017). And as explained below, Arizona's Due Process Clause provides more robust 4 protections to Sarra than the federal Constitution. Sarra wins under either the state or the 5 federal Due Process Clause.

6 1. Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause

7 Mathews requires a balance of three factors: (1) the private interests affected by the 8 official action; (2) the risk of erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures 9 used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or substitute safeguards; and (3) the 10 government's interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative 11 burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirements would entail. 424 U.S. at 335.

12 First, Sarra has weighty private interests. Her "good name, reputation, honor, [and] 13 integrity" are all protected private interests. Wisconsin v. Constantineau, 400 U.S. 433, 437 (1971).
14 There is a "protectable interest" in "reputation" where, as here, the stigma of being placed on 15 the list of child abusers is "tied to" Sarra's interest in "privacy and autonomy of family 16 relationships." Bohn v. Dakota County, 772 F.2d 1433, 1435 (8th Cir. 1985).

17 The Mathews "private interests" are broader in scope than the life/liberty/property 18 interests or fundamental rights necessary to satisfy the substantive aspects of the Due Process 19 Clause. Mathews itself is a testament to that. The "private interest" in preventing termination of 20 social-security benefits triggered the Mathews test even though there is no recognized 21 fundamental right to social-security benefits.

22 Sarra has a "private interest" in "neutral adjudication in appearance and reality," and 23 that interest is "magnified where the agency's final determination is subject only to deferential 24 review." Horne, 242 Ariz. at 230 ¶14. Relatedly, she has an interest in obtaining "meaningful" 25 judicial review. Mathews, 424 U.S. at 333; Free Enterprise Fund v. PCAOB, 561 U.S. 477, 489
26 (2010) (recognizing "meaningful judicial review" as a private interest); Cook v. State, 230 Ariz.
27 185, 190 ¶19 (App. 2012) (same). The first Mathews factor, thus, favors Sarra.

28

1 Second, the risk of erroneously depriving Sarra of these private interests through DCS's 2 administrative-adjudication procedure is high, and there are no additional or substitute 3 procedural safeguards except this Court's stay of the agency decision. Names once placed in 4 the Central Registry remain there for 25 years unless a court orders otherwise. A.R.S. § 8-5 804(G); Phillip B., 2022 WL 2128078, at ¶1. A rule like A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b), which 6 prevents DCS from automatically placing a person's name in the Central Registry if the person 7 "timely appeal[s]," is constitutionally necessary to prevent erroneous deprivation of the 8 person's private interests. The rule is workable because it requires no further action from DCS 9 if the person timely appeals DCS's decision.

10 A JRAD Rule 3 stay motion is a substitute procedural safeguard, but not an adequate 11 one. A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b) does not condition nonplacement in the Central Registry on 12 the showing of a "colorable claim" or "balance of harm" on appeal. It simply states: if there is 13 a "timely appeal," there is no "substantiated finding." In other words, a timely appeal renders 14 DCS's decision provisional until the Superior Court affirms it. A rule that prevents the 15 investigating, prosecuting, and adjudicating agency from also executing its decision against a 16 private party—i.e., maintaining the status quo ante—should be Due Process 101. In contrast, 17 a rule that frees the agency's hand to also execute its unilateral, in-house decision against the 18 private party while the Superior Court evaluates the decision's merits flunks Mathews. The 19 second Mathews factor thus also favors Sarra.

20 And third, the government has little to no interest in placing Sarra's name in the Central 21 Registry before she exhausts her state court appeal. Mathews determined that there would be a 22 negative fiscal effect on the government if individuals received social-security funds while they 23 exhausted appeals. 424 U.S. at 347. The third factor favored the government in Mathews. Not 24 so here. Making a Central Registry entry takes a few keystrokes' worth of a DCS employee's 25 time. Even if minuscule, the rule Sarra proposes saves DCS a few cents—a fiscal benefit for 26 the government. In contrast, the prospect of depriving Sarra of her good name, reputation, 27 privacy, and meaningful judicial review, is many orders of magnitude worse in comparison. The 28 third Mathews factor thus also favors Sarra.

1 In sum, the Mathews analysis shows that a rule like A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b) is 2 constitutionally necessary under the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause. The Court 3 should so hold.

4 2. Arizona Constitution's Due Process Clause

5 Arizona's Due Process Clause, Ariz. Const. art. 2, § 4, provides greater protections to 6 Sarra. The federal Constitution "sets a floor for the protection of individual rights. ... Other 7 federal, state, and local government entities generally possess authority to safeguard individual 8 rights above and beyond the rights secured by the U.S. Constitution." American Legion v.
9 American Humanist Ass'n, 139 S. Ct. 2067, 2094 (2019) (Kavanaugh, J., concurring); see also 10 Stanley G. Feldman, V.C.J. & David L. Abney, The Double Security of Federalism: Protecting 11 Individual Liberty Under the Arizona Constitution, 20 Ariz. St. L.J. 115, 116 (1988) ("[N]either the 12 delegates who created our constitution in 1910, the citizens who adopted it, nor the Congress 13 and president who finally approved its implementation in 1912 could have intended that federal 14 constitutional law would protect the rights and liberties of Arizona's populace.').

15 Arizona courts have not adopted Mathews under Arizona's Due Process Clause. State v.
16 Wagner, 194 Ariz. 310, 313 ¶15 (1999). Arizona has probably rejected the third Mathews factor, 17 and Arizona gives "dispositive" weight to the second Mathews factor. James S. v. DCS, No. 1 18 CA-JV 18-0150, 2019 WL 613219, at *8 (App. Feb. 14, 2019) (Perkins, J., dissenting) ("The 19 dispositive question for us under [Mathews] turns on the extent to which the procedure presents 20 the risk of erroneous deprivation of ... rights."); see also Philip Hamburger, The Inversion of Rights 21 and Power, 63 Buff. L. Rev. 731 (2015) (government interests cannot become lazy substitutes 22 for careful definition of rights).

23 The Arizona formulation makes sense given that the countervailing interest in 24 government efficiency is often nebulous and insufficient to overcome the private interests at 25 stake in cases applying Mathews. See, e.g., Trisha A., 247 Ariz. at 98 ¶67 (Bolick, J., dissenting) 26 (government's interest in "administrative efficiency" does not outweigh the individual's 27 interest) (quoting Lassiter v. Dep't of Soc. Services of Durham County, 452 U.S. 18, 28 (1981)). All 28 three Mathews factors already go in Sarra's favor. She is protected to a greater extent under the 1 state constitution's Due Process Clause—which considers the second factor dispositive. She 2 has therefore shown a colorable claim exists that a rule like Subsection (17)(b) is constitutionally 3 necessary.

4 Relying on the Mathews test, courts in many other states have held it unconstitutional to 5 place a person's name in the Central Registry on the basis of mere probable cause, rather than 6 an evidentiary standard such as preponderance of the evidence. See, e.g., Valmonte v. Bane, 18 7 F.3d 992, 1004 (2d Cir. 1994); Jamison v. State, Dep't of Soc. Servs., Div. of Fam. Servs., 218 S.W.3d 8 399, 406 (Mo. 2007); Petition of Preisendorfer, 719 A.2d 590, 593 (N.H. 1998); Cavarretta v. Dep't of 9 Child. & Fam. Servs., 660 N.E.2d 250, 258 (Ill. 1996); Lee TT. v. Dowling, 664 N.E.2d 1243, 1251– 10 52 (N.Y. App. 1996). “Probable cause,” of course, falls below “preponderance of the 11 evidence,” and is equivalent to a form of substantiated suspicion. In re Twenty-Four Thousand 12 Dollars ($24,000) in U.S. Currency, 217 Ariz. 199, 202 ¶13 (App. 2007); Gonzales v. City of Phoenix, 13 203 Ariz. 152, 155 ¶13 (2002). Consequently, courts that have addressed the issue have 14 concluded that it is unconstitutional to place a person in a Central Registry on the basis of mere 15 probable cause.

16 In Jamison, the court found it unconstitutional to place two nurses' names in Missouri's 17 Central Registry based on accusations of neglect. 218 S.W.3d at 402. The investigator issued a 18 report finding probable cause to substantiate the accusation, whereupon the agency placed their 19 names in the Registry after substantiating a probable-cause finding. Id. at 403. The state 20 supreme court found this improper under Mathews. The risk of an erroneous conclusion, the 21 court said, meant the penalty of placing names in the Central Registry could only be imposed 22 based on the preponderance of the evidence; the probable cause standard “is ill suited to the 23 determination of whether an individual has abused or neglected a child,” the court said, because 24 it “does not require a fact finder to balance conflicting evidence” and “places the brunt of the 25 risk of error, if not the entire risk of error, on the alleged perpetrator.” Id. at 411 (simplified).
26 Thus “[d]ue process requires [an agency] to substantiate a report of child abuse or neglect by a 27 preponderance of the evidence before an individual's name can be included in and disseminated 28 from the Central Registry.” Id. at 412. The other cited cases reached similar conclusions. For

1 this reason alone, the placement of Sarra's name in the Registry is unconstitutional under either 2 or both Due Process Clauses—and, again, constitutional avoidance counsels in favor of 3 granting the stay requested, pending final adjudication of this and other issues noted in the 4 Notice of Appeal.

5 Under either Arizona's or the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause, a rule like 6 A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b)—as properly interpreted—is constitutionally necessary. Sarra has 7 stated a colorable, plausible claim under both Clauses. The Court should so announce and stop 8 DCS from placing Sarra's name in the Central Registry while this case remains pending, or 9 order it removed from the Central Registry if DCS has already placed it there.

10 D. The Separation of Powers Clause Requires Staying Agency Execution of 11 an Adjudicative Decision Rendered by the Same Agency to Allow 12 Independent State Courts to Decide the Merits

13 Arizona's Separation of Powers Clause divides the powers of the government “into 14 three separate departments,” and prohibits any one department from exercising the powers 15 “properly belonging” to other departments. Ariz. Const. art. 3. Sarra states a colorable claim 16 that it violates the Separation of Powers Clause for the investigating, prosecuting, and 17 adjudicating agency to execute its decision against the private party before the Superior Court 18 reviews the decision's merits. DCS's hasty placement of a person's name in the Central Registry 19 ill serves both the due-process and separation-of-powers guarantees of the Arizona 20 Constitution. See Nathan S. Chapman & Michael W. McConnell, Due Process as Separation of 21 Powers, 121 Yale L.J. 1672 (2012) (discussing due process as a particular instantiation of 22 separation of powers).

23 There is no question that DCS and OAH are both executive-branch agencies. There is 24 no question that DCS investigated, prosecuted, and decided Sarra's case. Deciding cases is not 25 an “executive” function; it is a judicial function. Not even James Landis, the leading expositor 26 and defender of administrative power during the twentieth century, believed the fiction that 27 the executive is “executing” the law whenever an executive agency adjudicates cases in 28 performance of delegated adjudicative power. James M. Landis, The Administrative Process 15 (1966) (“It is obvious that the resort to administrative process is not, as some suppose, simply

1 an extension of executive power. . . . Confused observers have sought to liken this development 2 to a pervasive use of executive power.”).

3 Landis is right. The notion that DCS is merely “executing” the law is a transparent 4 fiction because DCS also investigated, prosecuted, and adjudicated the child-neglect allegation 5 against Sarra. The notion that DCS can then execute its own decision against a private party 6 before waiting for judicial review conflicts with the Arizona Constitution’s guarantee that the 7 judicial department’s function properly belongs to the judicial department, so no self-help 8 execution by DCS can be constitutionally permissible before such judicial merits-review occurs.
9 Arizona courts have repeatedly and robustly applied the Separation of Powers Clause by 10 evaluating which department is performing which function and deciding whether that function 11 properly belongs to another department. J.W. Hancock Enterprises, Inc. v. Registrar of Contractors, 12 142 Ariz. 400, 405 (App. 1984); State ex rel. Woods v. Block, 189 Ariz. 269 (1997); Brnovich, 242
13 Ariz. 588; Enterprise Life, 248 Ariz. 625 (App. 2020); Roberts v. Arizona, __ Ariz. __, 2022 WL 14 2560002 (July 8, 2022).

15 Thus, a rule like A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b), which, properly interpreted, bars a person’s 16 name from being placed in the Central Registry if the person timely appeals, and while judicial 17 review is underway, is necessary to make the DCS-substantiation statutory scheme satisfy the 18 Separation of Powers Clause. The Court should conclude that Sarra has presented a colorable, 19 plausible claim and stay DCS’s decision.

20 In sum, the first JRAD Rule 3(b) factor (colorable claim) goes in Sarra’s favor. Either 21 under Arizona’s or the Fourteenth Amendment’s Due Process Clause, or Arizona’s Separation 22 of Powers Clause, or as a matter of applying A.A.C. § R21-1-501(17)(b)’s plain words to avoid 23 addressing constitutional issues, this Court should stop DCS from placing Sarra’s name in the 24 Central Registry while this case remains pending, or order it removed from the Central Registry 25 if DCS has already placed it there.

26 II. The Harm to Sarra Outweighs Any Conceivable Harm to DCS

27 The second JRAD Rule 3(b) factor (balance of harm) also goes in Sarra’s favor. While 28 this factor does not require the showing of “irreparable harm,” Pe-P, 211 Ariz. at 510 ¶23,

1 Sarra is nonetheless irreparably harmed if DCS enters her name in the Central Registry without 2 waiting for this Court to decide the merits. If entered, her name will remain in the Central 3 Registry for 25 years, absent an order directing DCS to remove it. A.R.S. § 8-804(G). Even 4 when a court orders DCS to remove names wrongfully entered in the Central Registry, DCS 5 claims that it does not have to remove the name until after it seeks further appellate review, and 6 such review is denied. Cf. ARCAP 24.

7 A.R.S. § 8-804 lists at least 20 ways in which a Central Registry entry can and will be used 8 against Sarra, including but not limited to:

- 9 • Determining her qualifications for any job where she would be near a child;
- 10 • Determining her eligibility for employment with the state, a child welfare agency, or 11 positions that provide direct service to children or vulnerable adults;
- 12 • And informing any governmental or nongovernmental employer where she seeks a 13 job to provide direct services to children.

14 These are comprehensive and devastating harms. Cf. Jamison, 218 S.W.3d at 406. Sarra 15 works with refugees, some of them children. Exh1:4. Placement in the Central Registry will 16 have a ruinous effect on her work helping refugees.

17 In contrast, no harm “would accrue to the agency or other parties to the proceeding.”
18 Peep, 211 Ariz. at 510 ¶23. The balance of harm, therefore, tips in Sarra’s favor. She satisfies 19 the JRAD Rule 3 standard for granting stays. The Court should stay DCS’s decision.

19 III. The Court Should Waive the Bond, or Require Only a Nominal-Value Bond

20 A.R.S. § 12-911(A)(1) authorizes this Court to waive the bond when it stays agency 21 decisions. JRAD Rule 3(c) echoes the same. There is no DCS-related statute that states 22 otherwise. See A.R.S. § 12-911(A)(1) (“unless required by the statute under authority of which 23 the administrative decision was entered”); JRAD Rule 3(c) (“except as otherwise provided by 24 statute”). There is no relevant “bond” requirement in A.R.S. Title 8.

25 This is not the type of case in which a bond is typically required. Sarra is not asking the 26 Court to stay the payment of monies. See, e.g., Kresock v. Gordon, 239 Ariz. 251, 254 ¶11 (App.
27 2016) (finding a bond is typically required when “damages [are] awarded”; attorney-fee awards 28 are not to be included in calculating the amount of bond). She is only asking to stay the DCS

1 decision so that her name is not prematurely placed in the Central Registry. Because the 2 “potential harm to the agency’s interest or that of another party” is not monetary, there is no 3 potential harm that can be “mitigat[e]d” by requiring a bond. Peep, 211 Ariz. at 510 ¶24. There 4 are no “monetary or performance considerations ... involved,” meaning that “a security or 5 performance bond” is not required from Sarra. Id.

6 In the alternative, if in the Court’s view a bond would sufficiently “allay the harm” under 7 the balance-of-harm factor, id. at ¶24, the Court should require the posting of only a nominal-8 value bond of $1.

9 Conclusion

10 The Court should (1) stop DCS from placing Sarra L.’s name in the Central Registry 11 while the case remains pending in Arizona’s courts, or order DCS to remove her name from 12 the Central Registry if DCS has already placed it there, and (2) waive the bond, or require only 13 a nominal-value bond of $1.

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

There are no applicable length requirements for motions in the JRAD rules other than JRAD Rule 1(c), which states that “the Local Rules of Practice for the superior court in the county in which the action for judicial review of an administrative decision is filed apply to proceedings brought pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 12-901 to -914.”

Maricopa County Local Rule 3.2(f) states that the “length of motions, responses, replies and memoranda are governed by the Arizona Rules of Civil Procedure.”

ARCP 7.1(a)(2) states that a motion should “not exceed 17 pages, exclusive of attachments and any required statement of facts.”

This Motion for Stay of Agency Decision complies with ARCP 7.1(a)(2), Maricopa County Local Rule 3.2(f), and JRAD Rule 1(c), because it does “not exceed 17 pages, exclusive of attachments and any required statement of facts.”
